Taunton, the county town of Somerset, is of considerable size and great antiquity. It derives its name from its position on the banks of the River Tone (Saxon, Tantune). The chief objects of interest in the town are the church of St. Mary Magdalen, justly considered one of the finest Perpendicular churches in the country, and the ancient castle in which Judge Jeffreys held the "Bloody Assize," now used as the museum of the Somerset Archaeological and Natural History Society.
